Overview

The Inclusive Service Standards were developed to assist aged care organisations become better equipped at addressing the diverse needs of their consumers. The Standards provide a framework for service providers to enable them to embed a systemic and holistic approach that focuses on adapting and improving current services and organisational practices so they are welcoming, safe and accessible for everyone.

By meeting the Inclusive Service Standards, aged care services will be able to:

- better meet the needs of consumers from special needs groups
- empower these consumers to make informed decisions about the service they receive
- deliver flexible, accessible services that are free of barriers and discrimination
- implement a consumer directed approach
- achieve quality outcomes for all consumers.

Using this tool

This Organisational Audit and Planning Tool sets out a series of performance measures designed to assist service providers to meet the Inclusive Service Standards.

Using this tool organisations are able to review current practices against each measure, identify areas for improvement and undertake further planning and development.

This tool is published as a fillable PDF document allowing you to download and enter and edit text as required.

Alignment with Aged Care Quality Standards

All aged care organisations are expected to deliver care and services that are inclusive and do not discriminate.

Meeting the performance measures listed in this Organisational Audit and Planning Tool provides evidence that an organisation has embedded an inclusive non-discriminatory approach to its delivery of care and services.

Each performance measure in this tool has been aligned with relevant Aged Care Quality Standards requirements as set out in the ‘Guidance and Resources for Providers to Support the Aged Care Quality Standards’ published by the Aged Care Quality and Safety Commission.

Companion resources

This tool is part of a suite of resources that support the implementation of the Inclusive Service Standards. It is recommended that service providers familiarise themselves with these companion resources before undertaking the organisational audit.
